combines the power of its Professional and Enterprise versions, resulting in a full feature, easy-to-use application that allows you to create and maintain online and offline Help in a variety of formats. This version includes several improvements over the v.3.7, including an improved Help database and support for the latest versions of Office such as Office 2007. Full offline Help is also supported, as well as documentation for creating Help for Office XP Help files. Doc-To-Help Enterprise 2006 includes the following: - How to create and test your Help file in Windows using Doc-To-Help Enterprise. - Using Help Express to upload and verify your Help file from within your browser. - Using Help Author to create and deploy your Help files.

What's New In ComponentOne Doc-to-Help Enterprise 2006?

Doc-To-Help Enterprise 2006 ensures that content and formatting is maintained as the Help files change over time. This solution also provides easier production of browser-based help, reducing the need for browser-based support. Document authoring capabilities are enhanced so that content and formatting can be maintained if the Help file is updated or converted. Any update can be made without requiring users to close and restart the application. You can set topic links and conditional text to change the Help file with changes in the content. An extended Help file template editor enables flexible control over the structure and elements within the file. You can insert or modify page breaks in the file without having to open the document to change. The template editor is enhanced with an option for previewing and evaluating the file before converting it. You can save your custom templates in the application or customize the templates to fit the needs of your organization. You can assign new templates and modify existing templates for easy maintenance. If the Help file should be converted to another format you can easily customize the conversions for the files. This component makes it easier to produce Help files that include color and image content.

Description: The Document Companion for Confluence provides the ability to create customized documentation that includes a formatting and placement of shapes, images, and slide content based on a template. The documentation can be provided in HTML format to be displayed in a browser, or in Confluence format for viewing in Confluence. Features include:

- ☐ Features: Create almost any possible shape, image, and slide. Create content that always appears in the location of your choosing. Style specific content, including images and slide content, to maintain their formatting. Create content for the HTML5 Interactive Help format, and Confluence format for use in Confluence. Provide a documentation file in Confluence, HTML5 Interactive Help, or Word format. Integrate Help into Confluence.

Limitations: Requires Confluence Server to be installed.
