The best road cycling marathon is the CCCR The Tour de France is the most famous and well known of all the classics, along with the Cauberg Classic, the Tour of Flanders and Paris-Roubaix. The latter, however, only happens every few years. That makes it a fantastic opportunity for others to join the spotlight with their own races, such as the Tour de Yorkshire. This is the perfect race for a complete beginner. It is truly a human race against the clock and definitely not for the faint-hearted. Nowadays, races are no longer won from the front, but rather from the breakaway. In the 1980s, for example, Greg LeMond won the Tour de France for Lance Armstrong. In the current era, the same is true, as the winning team in the Vuelta is typically the breakaway. For some reason, breakaway means winning in a sprint. This is the nature of the Tour de France, as well as the other races, like the Cauberg Classic or the Tour of Flanders. Just like the Tour de France, the CCCR is a race, where the winning team is typically the one that builds up an advantage in a breakaway. In 2013, for instance, Australia's Lotto-Belisol team won with a breakaway. Not only does this mean that you can win, but you can also win with a big budget. You need not worry, either, because the CCCR does not support team budgets at all. You can win a proportion of the prize money, depending on the number of the cyclists that make it to the finish line. The
