For example, if I want to plot $f(x,y) = x^2 - y^2$, what is the syntax? I don't know how to do this: plot [x = -2:2] f(x) A: Based on your example you need to give two extra lines, one to separate y and x and one to plot the function itself: plot [x=-2:2, y=0] '-x*x-y*y'  Settings  Suite Setup Run Tests Check test timeout value ${EMPTY} Library SeleniumLibrary ... * "GeoFeeder is a tool for displaying metadata about locations in the form of map overlays on an HTML web map. A common problem faced by people doing internet research is to find out more about what's in a specific location. If you have a web map (eg Google Maps, Virtual Earth, Yahoo! Maps, OpenStreetMap, and many others), then GeoFeeder allows you to display this information in the form of a simple map overlay." (p.17, From Earth, the API for Geographical Information) * "With the GeoFeeder tool, users can find lots of information about maps in a location. For instance, a user can get a list of the geocodes (lat/long coordinates) of places, or a list of the titles and authors of books and movies associated with these coordinates. There is a user-friendly interface for these lists, where the data is presented as simple overlays over a map. Moreover, with the GeoFeeder tool, users can get a list of zip codes, cities, streets, or other geographical entities associated with a specific point on the map, and this data can also be overlaid directly over a map." (p.20, From Earth, the API for Geographical Information) * "GeoFeeder is released as open source software under the GNU public licence and is available free of charge. The current version, GeoFeeder 1.0, was released in May 2005."
