DDB2 is a tumor-suppressor protein that contains nuclear localization and export signals, and is involved in cell-cycle control and DNA damage response. We discovered here that the abundance of DDB2 is low in G(1) cells but rapidly restored upon S phase entry as the result of ubiquitin-mediated proteasome degradation. Upon replication stress triggered by HU treatment or the ATR inhibitor, it was shown that DDB2 was required for the maintenance of genomic integrity. During the S phase, DDB2 decreased at telophase, co-localizing with the replication sites and enhancing the degradation of PCNA. However, lack of DDB2 did not affect p21(Cip1/Waf1) induction and phosphorylation of Chk1. This suggested that in contrast to G1/S progression, the degradation of DDB2 triggered by ATR/Chk1 is

I have a two-liner (yes I know, not ideal, to say the least). The top half just saves the input and values of the various widgets. The bottom half, which I don't understand, just "listens" for the input to "change" in such a way that it resets the form to the lowest number. I don't want that to happen because it resets everything else to 0. Is there a way to just reset the lowest value (which would trigger the "reset to lowest" since it's the lowest value), but not the rest of the form? This is rather trivial, so there's no reason for this question, but here we go... A: Sounds like you'd like to 09e8f5149f
