Each layer is a single image that you can change independently of the others. You can merge the layers together to create unique composites of several photos. Fraudulent use of proxy votes This article looks at the use of proxy votes in the context of electoral fraud, including how fraudulent use of proxy votes is prevented by law. It also explains how fraud in elections is often detected at a very late stage and how electoral stakeholders such as returning officers are key to the detection of fraudulent use of proxy votes. What is proxy voting and the electoral rules? A proxy vote is a form of vote which an individual may authorise to be cast for them. This may be, for example, to allow a proxy to vote on their behalf because they are not physically available to vote. Similarly, an authorised proxy may be employed to cast a vote on behalf of another person. The rules for proxy voting differ between each of the UK countries. The rules for proxy voting in the UK are set out in the Electoral Commission's Electoral Administration (Proxy Voting) Regulations. These are: "A person is allowed a proxy vote for the purposes of Article 18(1) of the Representation of the People Act 1983 if all of the following are satisfied: (a) that they are a member of the Electoral Register; (b) that they are: (i) a natural person, or (ii) a juristic person who is resident in the United Kingdom, (c) that they are entitled, either under this Part or by virtue of the provisions of the Representation of the People Act 1983, to vote under the provisions of this Part; and (d) that they have provided the Returning Officer with evidence that they are entitled to vote under this Part." Hence, it is illegal for someone to provide a proxy on behalf of someone else unless they are an eligible voter and are entitled to vote under the Electoral Administration Act 2006. An example of the prohibition is found in section 1 of the Representation of the People Act 1983. This law prevents a person providing a proxy for any other person who is disqualified from voting. In other words, a person is only allowed to provide a proxy for someone else if they are a registered voter themselves. So, for example, if the election is for a specific constituency and someone votes in a different constituency, this is illegal. Proxy voting will only be available to people who are entitled to vote. Proxy voting is also only available to individuals or businesses if they are registered voters. It is not

Q: Calling awk on cgi script I have a cgi script which accepts a data string (dta) and output a few files (data.csv, summary.csv). I have stored the dta string in a text file. The data structure stored in the dta is as follows: -1.0,"Zone-A","Zone-A" 1.0,"Zone-B","Zone-B" 5.5,"Zone-C","Zone-C" The cgi script is running in Unix shell. I am trying to store the values for dta which are in this format into a hash using bash script. a=$(awk -v i="$dta" '{print $1*i+$2*i+$3*i}') echo $a It's returning the following error: awk: cannot open file `dta' for reading awk: cannot open file `Zone-A' for reading awk: cannot open file `Zone-B' for reading awk: cannot open file `Zone-C' for reading How do I overcome this? I am unable to store the values for dta into a hash using awk. A: You can use awk to read, parse and match the CSV content like this $ cat tst.awk BEGIN { FS=OFS="\t" } NR==FNR { dta[NR] = $0 next } $1~/^(\d+),(.),(.)$/ { a[NR]=$1*$2*$3 } END { for (i=1; iNR?" ":"" for (j=1; j
