In other words, the use of the trans-fused PCNU analogues was not sensitive to the cis-2 configuration of the cyclopentane ring. Moreover, these results also suggest that the activity was not due to the complexation of copper(I) species to give a free-radical intermediate. Spectroscopic Investigation of the Reaction Mechanism {#sec3.2}

----- To further investigate the reaction mechanism, the reaction of Cp*Cu(NHC) (1a--d) with 4-bromoanisoole was investigated by using DMSO as a solvent, and the results are summarized in Table [4{ref-type="other"}](#tbl4){ref-type="other"}. The mechanistic scheme can be inferred from the results reported in Table [4{ref-type="other"}](#tbl4){ref-type="other"} as follows: the catalytic hydrohalogenation process of 4-bromoanisoole did not occur at a fast rate at room temperature, and only a small amount of the main halogenation product (2a) was observed; the reaction took place in the presence of the trans-fused PCNU analogues at room temperature; after the reaction, the trans-fused PCNU analogues were regenerated by the halogen atom, and the conversion to the corresponding halogenated product was relatively complete; after the reaction, some of the active copper species were trapped by the solvent DMSO, which led to the decrease of catalytic activity; and only a trace amount of the trans-fused PCNU analogues was detected. The spectroscopic data support the proposed catalytic cycle. 09e8f5149f
