1. Figure 6-9: The Step Forward dialog box. It contains several elements of the tool palette. The first item is the color grid, which enables you to check for color accuracy. If it doesn't work, you can fix it or switch to the sample color map for a better way to select colors. You also have access to resolution and image size. 2. Click OK. Photoshop opens a dialog box where you can select a Target Res image size, and you see a ruler to specify the dimensions of the canvas. You also have access to a color picker that enables you to select the color for the Target Res image. Figure 6-10 shows the Target Res dialog box. 3. Drag the top row of the dialog box to the right until you reach the right edge of the canvas where you want to create your image. * * * Figure 6-10: The Target Res dialog box. 3. Click OK. Photoshop creates a canvas with the dimensions you specified. 4. Click the New Layer button from the Library tab to create a new layer. The New Layer dialog box opens. 5. Type a name for your layer, such as background. * * * Figure 6-11: The new layer dialog box. 6. Click OK. The layer icon appears on the layers panel. 7. Set the blending mode of the new layer to Soft Light. Photoshop blends the image layer over the background layer, softening the colors. 8. Click the Edit tab and select the Type tool. The Options bar for the Type tool (refer to Figure 6-3) appears. 9. Click the pencil icon, and then select the Basic text tool. 10. Type the text on the Photoshop canvas. You can type the text in a variety of ways: • Click where you want to type. The text area appears. • Press the letter or number keys on the keyboard. You can type the entire word at once by holding down the Shift key while typing. • Use the Option or Alt keys for special characters. • Pressing the Control key selects and typing changes the typeface. •

At Crockett, starting this fall, the football team and boys basketball team will be able to play on new synthetic turf fields at the school's new sports medicine facility, which will be fully operational by the first of the year, said school district athletic director Tommy Cervantes. That means the varsity football team will have the chance to practice on the turf before its Sept. 13 season opener against summer enrollment rival Whitehouse Memorial. With Crockett's new facility, the boys basketball team will be able to have its first full practices on that turf as early as the first week of October. Cervantes said the timing of Crockett's new field was necessary because of the warm-up time it takes for synthetic turf to fully mature. For the 2017-18 school year, the football team will start at Crockett High School. Cervantes said the team's practices will be held at the field for the week before school begins. The warming up process is significant because Crockett is usually a last-place team in the two-year playoff race, while Whitehouse and White

Q: Python: referencing at for loop end when the loop is large Possible Duplicate: Python: Passing a loop variable by reference? My problem is to write a code to read a large file (each line is a record, the first line is of the number of lines in the file). In the while loop, I assign values to an array. For example, 'a'= line, 'b'=line 2, 'c'=line 3. Then I print the values of this array in a range of lines. For example, print a,b,c. This code works fine for small files. However, when the number of lines is large, sometimes the index exceeds the lenght. For example, when the file is almost 1000 lines long and the array has 1000 elements, some of the lines have a problem. I do not understand why, because if I use the following solution: for line in f: my_list=[] for line2 in range(line,1000): print(line) my_list.append(line2) print(my_list) Then everything is ok. I use the first method sometimes, and sometimes I use the second one. Is there a difference in using the two methods? Do I need to use the second method all the time? Thanks a lot. A: You can use enumerate() which will return the index and the value. for index, line in enumerate(f): print("Line", index, "=", line) You also don't need to make a list just to read a value from a file. A: You don't need a list if you don't intend to modify the values. Python is a high-level interpreted language, so it is usually better to use lists only when you intend to modify the values. For example, if you want to create a generator that will return each line of your file in turn, you can do it without a list with: for line in open('filename', 'r'): # do something with the line Just do the same thing for each index value you wish to obtain. For example: for index, line in enumerate
