"One of the best games I've played in quite a while"Sega Plays Gameplay: "After several hours of content, the game has some fantastic gun play, a unique mechanic and lots of time to spare." 2 PLAYERS 1 GAME Addicting gameplay and great price! "The fundamental gameplay loop is just one of the reasons you should check it out."— Destructoid "The game plays like a video game, but it looks like a horror movie, and it doesn't end with a happy Disney ending. Based on the award-winning film and co-developed by Nihilistic Software and Ubisoft Reflections, No More Room in Hell 2: Terminal Velocity features an intense multiplayer PvP mode that pits players against one another as they band together to escape the hellish Reapers. No More Room in Hell is one of the most exciting survival games I've ever played."Zach Gutschenritter— Game Critic "No More Room in Hell:TMV 2 is a decent enough follow-up to the first title, but it's only with the addition of a multiplayer component that this version truly shines. Because there are no NPCs in this game, every player is his or her own last resort, and the only thing separating a lasting friendship from a bitter fate is your ability to make a fast decision and take on the Reaper threat."— Game Revolution "No More Room in Hell (which is already on Xbox Live as an exclusive) is still a survival game that's a blast to play; it just also has a multiplayer mode that lets you team up with a buddy and escape the world's last chance to hold a candle. Throw in the aliens we have to deal with on the surface of the moon, and you'll be hooked for hours."— IGN "Enjoy your stay."— GameSpot No More Room in Hell 2 is a follow up to the cult acclaimed No More Room in Hell, which is already available on Xbox Live as an exclusive. This sequel delivers an all new experience with an awesome online cooperative and PvP multiplayer mode, matching up two players against hordes of Reaper enemies and an alien threat in the process. You are trapped in a cosmic quarantine zone from where no life has ever emerged. An alien monstrosity attacks the human outpost. You must survive long enough to escape. - Stunning visuals- Co-operative said: Didn't find any DOUBLE WIDE or multiwindow packages of GTCM or ACW. You're lucky there's no FORCEware copyright case looming about again. I'm gonna prove here that none of the Fedora/RPM packages includes any unlicensed copy of GTCM or ACW in the package itself? This is wrong. They're on the website. Prove me wrong. It's not difficult. githq: I always wondered what happened to gtc (it was announced on the Planet wayback in Jan 2009). So glad you just announced it. Will probably add it to my list of stuff I'd like to play around with when I have a spare afternoon or more. And Julian Humber wrote: Not to mention the hypocrisy of one IP law being OK to use while another is not. I don't understand how that is hypocrisy or hypocritical, because in that case it's simply enforcing the law. On piracy: Even I know that creative work used for non-infringing purposes shouldn't be viewed as "piratable" itself, since obviously that's not why that creative work was created. Such a solution would only hurt legitimate creators. But what AC is proposing here (if you take the "ulaw" part of what it's saying to mean things like "an agreement must be entered between content owners and redistributors that if something is redistributed it must not be monetized and the original source must be retained") is more like the Protestant argument where just using a one-time receipt of an item is enough to destroy its value. But just the fact that AC can selectively choose which laws apply to which cases or platforms is an extremely dangerous development. At the very least, if you take these things seriously, it's time for another copyright reform and you need to champion it. on pirates: Even I know that creative work used for non-infringing purposes shouldn't be viewed as "piratable" itself Like what? Making cottage cheese? Downloading an IBM PC emulator? The bottom line is that creative work used for non-infringing purposes is always going to be pirated. It would be ridiculous to expect otherwise. Unless, of course, we choose to ban, curtail or delay the development of digital communication channels. To put it another way, if I'm going to ask you to sell me a car, I'm probably

Cossacks! Bulgars! Cossacks! Cossacks! Finally, after all this time, the Cossacks have joined the ranks of battlefields. After a bloody defeat on a war torn battlefield, High Command are in need of elite military officers to keep the war-bonds strong. Gather your lads and order hails of devastating musket volley fire! Lead your soldiers to the frontline with the Cossacks at High Command. In the war-packed High Command DLC, you will find a wealth of dangerous missions against enemy forces. From the rolling plains of Russia to the forests of Poland, from the rocky steppes of the Ukraine to the sweltering swamps of the Caucasus, let them fight across the Cossack lands, and lead them into Hell as you will. Maternity phototutorial Pregnancy can be an extremely exciting time, but can also be stressful. At the moment you might feel that you feel a bit confused about what to do, how to do it and when to do it, in which direction to go and with whom? Don't worry, you are not the only one, everything will come back to normal after the baby is born. As soon as you are pregnant you start thinking about one thing, your child. What is this baby going to be like? how will he or she look? Will he or she look like you? Will she or he look like you? There are two things that could go wrong when you are pregnant and both of them can be real concerns for you: miscarriage and stillbirth. If you have decided to get pregnant and you have been tested to be sure you are pregnant you can relax and enjoy the time you are living! As all the important things of your life, you do not worry about who is the father of your child. It is your baby that you need to worry about. Miscarriage: The risk of miscarriage in the first trimester of the pregnancy is around 10%. These are usually small changes that happen in your body. You will see spots or blood when you wipe and that's normal. Don't worry about it. What you need to do is to go to the doctor and tell him about it, so you can be sure there is no infection or bleeding on the inside. Stillbirth: This is the most heartbreaking thing that can happen to a mother. It is very hard to accept that your

The banning of Pokémon Go in Australia and New Zealand comes as no surprise; it's already illegal here to hunt species of Pokémon with real firearms. My surprise, in general, comes in the form of how the craze for online game design really can run riot, provoking national policies. The extent to which the Commissioner for Customs and Border Protection, who has curtly stated the game was now over-it-really and the ban was coming, chose this moment to faff around the release of even one patch, appears to truly be a case of an app gone too far. Why a government would interrupt prosecution of hundreds of people attempting to import live baby seahorses is beyond me, but your fat boss's livelihood is not so fragile as ours; yours is finicky and fickle as always. But that's the only real surprise. Getting banned on legal grounds for public safety reasons is what we've come to expect from major film releases every year; making this influx of child convicts lollygag about on the streets with birds sans wings and spineless little footlings is many times more disturbing to our sensibilities than any thing a Hollywood fartmonger might come up with. The national news afforded us largely small-scale examples of players committing all manner of neglectful and crude behaviour over the last few days, whilst some were themselves the victims of drivers who whipped out their phones when they shouldn't, they were effectively let off the hook. Freedom of choice and ability to indulge in the most abject onanism in the world? It's a trade off. Yes, there's the right to do that but it's also the right for other laws to be enforced. Thankfully we have a government in place who can take that right away from you if you get involved in crimes committed on sports grounds against animals or sick individuals. I see
