sure many readers have other suggestions.) Can't make it work? Ah, Photoshop: It's complicated. Photoshop used to be a program that every digital artist needed to have. Nowadays, there are other options that provide more control or make the task of modifying images easier. Photoshop is still the standard, but many professional photographers now use other software products such as

I felt it was really cool and wanted to know how it was made. I tried to learn how to do it, but I didn't succeed. So I started searching on the web and found you can make some cool things with a printer and a sticker maker. They look really good and you are even able to print an image on the sticker. You can print any stickers, but the designs are often available in some online stores. How to create the pattern for the sticker maker As explained on the official page, you can use any image or a cartoon you made yourself. I chose to create my own caricature. I first have to import the image, edit it with Elements and print it on a sticker by using a sticker maker. Open Elements and go on File > Import. Choose the “Patterns” option and select the pattern you want to use (I used “Back of Superman” from comics). Then go on File > Open and select a sticker maker. You can find the ones I used here. The color of your sticker should be the same as the pattern, so choose a color you like and adjust it as you wish. Now go on Layout > Adjust Object and 05a79cecff

(CNN) — If you think you need a lot of time to pack your bags for your next big trip, think again.

Amazon.com founder Jeff Bezos' new space exploration company, Blue Origin, is hoping to make it a lot easier to get into outer space in the years to come. Blue Origin, founded in 2000, has the ambitious goal of making the first commercial flights to space -- for both passengers and cargo -- by 2023. It's also the company behind the world's largest private rocket, New Shepard, which is currently the only passenger-carrying vehicle in its class. Wealthy founder Bezos is, of course, not your typical billionaire. He's currently the richest man in the world, worth $105.2 billion at the time of this writing. He's been a space fanatic since he founded Amazon, and is the son of a successful computer scientist who invented first popular computer mouse. As a child, he spent his weekends exploring NASA's launch sites, and decided to invest millions of dollars in real estate when he realized that rockets would one day be a crucial piece of the space industry. Bezos founded Blue Origin to get ready for the space tourism industry. This is not the first space company he's founded. The company has also founded the rocket manufacturing company, Stratolaunch Systems, and the space tourism company, Blue Origin, according to Fortune Magazine. Blue Origin's headquarters is based in Kent, Washington. A journey to space It's not just about making a big budget space trip. Bezos wants to make a difference in the future of space travel. Blue Origin's mission is to make getting into space not only as efficient as possible, but also offer a wide array of private spaceflight options. The company's goal is to reduce the cost of space travel for potential astronauts, while also delivering more control to the companies that are interested in private spaceflight. "Our goal is to make sure that it's cost-effective, and... anybody can do this if they want to," Rich Garneau, Blue Origin's president and chief executive, told the Associated Press. Stratolaunch systems Blue Origin had its humble beginnings with a jet-powered rocket in 2010. In 2011, it launched a successful unmanned test flight called the "New Shepard" rocket. This rocket, which weighs 15 metric tons, is the

The 32-year-old British road cyclist added another prestigious prize to his resume when he took the Big Three stage at the Vuelta a Castilla y Leon de Aragón (2.3) in Spain on Thursday. After sprinting away from the leading group on the final climb, the peloton was then caught by Contador and Ferrer. Contador had attacked to take the lead but was eventually brought back. The Spaniard matched Ferrer for pace in the final 90 kilometres but a series of attacks from the Basque climber were enough to secure the win ahead of Ferrer, who had won the opening two stages of the race this morning. The Spaniard is building up to the Giro d'Italia on 11 May, where he could well win the maglia rosa. He currently trails Contador by five points, with Contador having won three of the previous four races.

Contador set the pace on the final climb yesterday and his teammate, Spaniard Mikel Nieve, got close to Contador on the final 7.4-kilometre stretch of the mountainside. Today's win takes Contador back to the top of the world rankings, with Spain's Sam Sanchez following on 13 points and Nieve dropping to second place with 15 points. Andy Schleck, second overall, was third in the race, 40 seconds back on Contador. He has now slipped further behind his brother and he lost 15 minutes in the stage win to Contador on the final climb. Schleck is just one point behind his brother and has plenty of chances to regain the lead in the race. Contador has been sitting in third overall for a week now, but he has made no moves in the time trials. He is not at risk of losing time but will undoubtedly be highly motivated. Contador was not helped by the fact that the four team cars leading the peloton moved off early, forcing some riders to go alone on the front. They should be the perfect springboard for the Spaniard's first attack. Juan Antonio Flecha took the win and also recovered 10 minutes on the previous stage winner, Roman Kreuziger. The Spanish rider is fifth overall and is tied on 46 points with Ferrer and Sanchez. Other riders who improved their position were Richie Porte, who is now sixth overall and is just half a minute off the lead, and Alejandro Valverde, who is now seventh overall and is
