[Pig-to-human allotransplantation of the pancreas]. The practical importance of allotransplantation of pancreatic islets is very difficult to assess. In a prospective study of the first 50 cases (23 males, 27 females, average age 34.5 years) of allotransplantation of the pancreas conducted between February 1985 and September 1989 at the Kiangsu Provincial Tumour Hospital, Kiangsu, China, 12 (24%) patients developed hyperglycaemia due to persistent graft rejection of the pancreas. Of these, 8 (88%) patients were treated with steroids and immunoglobulins and had no hyperglycaemia. Some of the 12 patients did not have a deceased donor. One of the 12 patients did not have a cadaver donor. The authors emphasize the importance of an increased number of cadaver donors in order to reduce the number of graft rejection cases. Knowledge, attitude and practice of pregnant women concerning lung cancer in three regions of Bangladesh. This cross-sectional study was conducted in three regions of Bangladesh to find out the knowledge, attitude and practice of pregnant women concerning lung cancer. To compare the knowledge, attitude and practice between different regions of Bangladesh. Totally, 120 pregnant women from the antenatal clinics of Upazila health complexes and two private obstetric clinics in Dhaka city and Rajshahi district were interviewed using a pretested questionnaire that included self-administered questionnaires. Nearly half (43.3%) of the pregnant women were aware of the definition of lung cancer, but they were not aware of its treatment. Poor awareness regarding lung cancer among pregnant women means that it will be very difficult for them to take early action when any symptom comes. Therefore, publ

ELDRING Fan of the game? Try our TO THE LAND BETWEEN Dear Adventurers, I'm Mo, the CEO and Editor of RR games. As this is the first report that I'm making on the game, I'll be tackling everything in brief. First of all, our development team is currently comprised of about ten members, most of whom are part-timers. This is a tough environment to live in for those without a clear goal, but the fact that we're one of the few companies in our field still in the development phase gives us the courage to aim high. We're working hard to expand and create new content on a frequent basis, and we're hoping that you'll continue to enjoy what we're doing. Our development progress can be seen at our official blog here: If you have any questions, please let me know. I'll answer to the best of my abilities. In order to show your support for us, we're planning on releasing at least one of the three planned campaigns, after the development is completed. Thank you for your support. do not own a personal arcade (nor do I really want to).Is your glass half-full, or half-empty? Depends on how you look at it. Science suggests that you can't look at a glass and say that it's half full or half empty, because it's not about what's inside the glass, but about how you see it. Recently, researchers from the George Mason University in Virginia demonstrated that when we think about something, it influences our feelings towards that thing, not just with just our brain, but also through the things we see and hear. Science in the News Lead researcher Anna-Karin Karazuski says that "what we think about, our mind and our bodily experiences provide us with a sense of what is possible, meaningful and valuable." By looking at a picture of a glass, a person's thought frame (what they think about the picture) can immediately transform its physical form. The glass is now depicted in a more positive way. Other researches have also demonstrated the same kind of mental changes in people, by looking at those glass. One of them, published in August, demonstrated that when you see a glass that is half full, people's mind becomes more positive too. Lead researcher Paul Ekman explains: "We're constantly seeing, hearing,
