“As more and more eSports athletes are being paid professional salaries, we want to offer a solution that allows all gamers, players and fans to experience the game in the same professional way as the top players,” said Carl Fogarty, executive vice president and chief marketing officer, EA. “Our long-term objective is to make the game feel more responsive and tactile. Along with this work, we will continue to make the game accessible for the largest number of players around the world.” Gamers can now select from the following “Difficulty Settings” – Standard, Normal, Hard, Expert, Master, and Legendary – to optimize their gameplay. The “Experience Level” setting has been removed from the game menu and will be added as part of a future update. The game introduces a new “Focus Tactic” mechanic. This new system allows players to tackle a player and then immediately shift their body into a defined “Focus Tactic.” Focus Tactic can then be executed in numerous ways, and can allow the player to gain an advantage in goal kicking, defending, attacking or dribbling, depending on which Focus Tactic the player selects. Players can use their Focus Tactic for a specified amount of time, or use a special Focus Tactic, and it can be activated either in possession of the ball or off ball. Focus Tactic will continue after a foul, when the player’s controlled area changes and when players change direction or teleport. For the first time in the history of FIFA, the game features an all-new “Save in Progress” mode. The “Save in Progress” option allows players to take advantage of the new features introduced in FIFA 22, with an option to save up to five “Save Files.” Additionally, players can review their progress in the game to pick back up at any time by using “Save Points”, which have been introduced to allow players to save their progress when they’re on a break or when they aren’t playing. “FIFA 22 is a very special football game – it has been created for the fans by the fans and it continues to push the limits of the genre in terms of innovation and accessibility,” said Ian Livingstone, vice president, FIFA. “We are thrilled to release a product that we can truly say is the biggest, most complete and most accessible
