Based on this technology, the ball behaves in dynamic, unpredictable ways in the game based on the player's individual skills, tactical positioning and the overall context on the pitch. FIFA 22 includes several new interactions for the ball, enhanced ball control in both game types, and new ways to control the ball and play with it. New Ball Control Interactions In the game, the ball can be moved in an infinite number of ways with 22 different controls. Two of the more innovative additions to ball control are the Pro-Direct Trajectory and the Pro-Direct Pivot. The Pro-Direct Trajectory allows players to choose between two action options when the ball is in the air, while the Pro-Direct Pivot allows players to control the ball during movement from feet to chest. The most common controls used when players want to move the ball and the goalkeeper wants to block the play are Pro-Direct Trajectory and Pro-Direct Pivot. In the image below, midfielder Bojan Krkic is shifting in the box to exploit the opposing goalkeeper's positioning. The Pro-Direct Trajectory is shown below: The Pro-Direct Trajectory allows players to slide the ball in various directions and to choose between taking evasive action or leaving the play for a pass from a teammate. With the Pro-Direct Trajectory, players can choose a Trajectory, Pivot or Pro-Direct Trajectory. In the Trajectory, players can choose a direction (down, left, right, up), in the Pivot players can choose a direction and then keep the ball with the direction of their feet (top, bottom, left, right). With the Pro-Direct Trajectory, the ball is always moving toward the direction players choose. Players can choose between the left and right, therefore the ball is moving either toward the right or to the left. With the Pro-Direct Trajectory, players can change the initial direction on the Trajectory by sliding the mouse pointer while the ball is in the air. Players can choose between the left and right for Trajectory, and players can choose between the top and bottom for Trajectory. In the Trajectory, the Ball Trajectory is controlled by the left and right mouse buttons and when the mouse pointer slides left or right, the Ball Trajectory begins sliding in that direction. Players can choose from up
