Hot on the heels of signs that the Philadelphia City Council is seriously considering regulatory reform, a Montgomery County official also said Monday that regulations take up too much time and money for community development agencies. Just weeks after the County Council approved a freeze on the local hiring of new workers in the Public Works Department, County Executive Isiah Leggett's office attempted to address longer term fiscal pressures on community development authorities by asking the Chester County Planning Commission to recommend a moratorium on the installation of new regulations for community development agencies. The County Council approved a one-year freeze in workforce growth Thursday while lawmakers haggle over strategies for de-regulating local government to reduce the portion of property taxes that contribute to the county's increasing $2.4 billion unfunded pension liability. The Pennsylvania Senate last week approved the state budget proposed by Gov. Ed Rendell, which reduces spending for the first time in almost three years and cuts off funding to more than 1,000 state agencies, including most school districts and a handful of community development authorities in Chester, Philadelphia, York and Washington counties.

This game is basically a precursor to Mario Party, it's basically an endless mode where the objective is to smash all of the ingredients on each of the levels. There are many levels, and as a player progresses to later levels, there are more things that can break, usually enemies that are on the stages that appear on later levels. The most important part of this game is the life bar, which controls your health and the amount of bombs that you can use. The bombs travel in a set path that you can see once you press up or down. They can not be thrown off of the screen, although you can jump on them. If you complete the game, you unlock the bonus mode of the game, called Super Bomb Bros.
