Q: How do you get the URL in the standard http only page? The URL is stored in a standard only page but I can't figure out how to get it from the Request object. I've tried the Url and the Uri in the constructor and neither work. Now it is just the standard value for the URL and not the full URL. A: OK, I figured it out. The Url has the following property to get the protocol and the host. // Protocol var protocol = UrlHelper.CreateMvcUrl(Request, "default", "Controller", "Action", ""); It is generally desirable to have an air, peristaltic pump that will operate effectively at high pressure or for extended periods of time. The greatest difficulty encountered in known prior art is that the pumping action of an air pump or air motor may be sustained for only a few minutes before a noticeable drop-off in pressure is noted. An example of a conventional air pump is shown in U.S. Pat. No. 1,944,052. The structure disclosed in this patent is not well adapted for long term use because of the flexible nature of the elastomeric material. Pressure relief or venting valves are frequently used with air pumps, but these devices are not capable of operating at high pressures and cannot be used with pumps having a long operating life, for example, peristaltic pumps.

Q: Multiplying two numbers in Unbordered text using python2 I have two numbers in unbordered text. I need to multiply them. for example number1=10, number2=6, Then the output should be like this number3=56 I have the number1 and number2, I need to multiply them. Any help is appreciated. A: You can use regular expression to check two adjacent words as in Python, the input is a string, import re number = re.sub('([a-zA-Z]+)(?=\s+[0-9]+)', '\\1*', number) Explanation: ([a-zA-Z]+): match a-zA-Z or any alphabet (using character class) (?=\s+[0-9]+): match a space followed by 0-9 one or more times
