This is the portable version for AmoK Exif Sorter, a feather-light Java-based Windows utility whose purpose is to rename multiple photos in batch mode by taking into account their EXIF information. It offers support only for JPG format and sports some advanced, yet simple-to-understand options that shouldn't impose difficulties to users, whether they are accustomed to this type of software or not. No installation required. Since this is a Java-based utility, you can immediately run the program on the computer without first unpacking it, provided that you have Java installed. Another possibility is to save Amok Exif Sorter to a USB flash disk or other removable storage unit, in order to run it on any PC with Java installed. Worth taking keeping in mind is that, unlike most installers, this app does not create new entries in the Windows registry or Start menu, so it does not leave any traces behind on the PC once it is removed. Classic interface with clear-cut options. Amok Exif Sorter is wrapped in a regular window with a well-structured layout, where you can get started by adding JPG images to the list and find out their name, default new file name and new path, as well as view their thumbnail within the main frame. Easily configure settings. When it comes to the sorting method, you can either copy, move or rename the files. It is possible to establish the saving directory and set AmoK Exif Sorter to use either the current date or last modified date for files with missing EXIF data. New profiles can be created and saved to use them in later projects. Evaluation and conclusion. There were no kind of issues in our tests, since AmoK Exif Sorter did not freeze, crash or display error notifications. It is pretty responsive to commands and sorts photos fast while using low CPU and memory, so it does not hog system resources and interfere with your normal activity on the PC. Its interface could use a new design but we must take into consideration that the tool has not been updated for a long time. Otherwise, Amok Exif Sorter does its job quite well and its features can be quickly figured out. p>...Q: Crystal Report: Is it possible to let a user view a report without a Crystal Report server? iCab Driver for Windows, one of the most popular open source CD/DVD/Blu-ray disc reading and writing application for Windows, has been upgraded to v4.18.0. The new version, which is available for download at Softpedia, is the first one to get a major release number. iCab 4.18.0 comes with a newly-designed Start Page, organized database and more. The Window design and Start Page improvements are shown in the following screen shots: Improved Database organization The updated iCab will remember your last five CD/DVD/Blu-ray disc drives in a new database, where they will be stored as bookmarks. It will also display different databases for different CD/DVD/Blu-ray drives. Note that only the default drive configuration will be remembered, though.

Improved Start Page The updated iCab will also offer a new Start Page design, which makes it easier to find what you're looking for in the application. At the top of the main window, iCab's Start Page will display the name of the database that you're using, the number of the last five discs you've inserted or the number of the first five disc you've ejected. With the latter option, the iCab Start Page will show you the total number of discs you've inserted or ejected, respectively. The other changes include:

- Improved database:
- New action bar:

Users can access the database from the action bar, which means that they will be able to remove or add new items with just a click. – Added support for EXIF album and vendor properties: The database can now contain multiple albums, each of which will show thumbnail images for the files. This applies to both EXIF-enabled and non-EXIF-enabled files. The internal editor uses multi-window and it can now show multiple data at once. With that, iCab Driver should be perfect for users with large collections of CDs, DVDs or Blu-rays, as well as for those who travel a lot. June 16 is World Wetlands Day.
