WASHINGTON - The International Monetary Fund expects growth in emerging markets to slow, as the global economy slows, while further action to resolve the U.S. government's debt crisis continues to weigh on demand in the United States and the eurozone. In a report issued on Tuesday, the IMF said emerging market growth would slow over the next two years. That would delay any recovery in the world's fastest-growing region, which makes up much of the world's output and demand. The IMF said in its world economic outlook issued a day earlier that risks to growth in the world economy have risen over the past year because of the euro zone's debt crisis, tighter U.S. fiscal policy, the U.S. government's debt problems and slow U.S. and world demand. The IMF said growth in advanced economies outside the euro area, led by the United States, was expected to grow by 2.7 percent in 2012, the same as in 2011, and would ease to just 1.5 percent in 2013. Emerging market growth is forecast to slow from 4.6 percent this year, to 4.3 percent next year and 4.1 percent in 2013. Emerging markets, which account for $1.3 trillion in global foreign exchange reserves, have been among the region's fastest-growing economies over the last decade, but the IMF says they have weakened recently as the global economy has slowed. EMERGING MARKETS Emerging market economies expanded 4.8 percent in the third quarter, the slowest pace since 2008, according to official data that the IMF said would likely be revised to show growth of 5.3 percent. The IMF called for stronger domestic policies and international coordination to respond to the global slowdown, which has begun to hit major economies hard from the United States to Europe. "Growth has slowed markedly in advanced economies, including the U.S., over the past few months, and it has remained weak in emerging economies," according to the IMF report. "The crisis in Europe and the near-term fiscal outlook in the U.S. have probably contributed to the sharp drop in exports. Protectionist measures taken by the United States to address its fiscal deficit and weakness in the global economy could also have a negative impact on the U.S. export recovery, but the U.S. housing slump remains the biggest factor," it added. Governments in Europe and the United States have launched a number
