It's not just that she has a half dozen years of congressional experience under her belt, nor is it because she's been in the Senate, but she has a certain kind of intuitive understanding of how the system works. She's been on the wrong side of the big issues and experienced the frustrations of getting beat up for it, and she's actually pretty easy to get along with, even though she's far from a perfect human being. She's a big part of the problem. She is a know-it-all who knows it all, and that was a big part of her being a prosecutor. And a longtime campaigner, and someone who has run for high office before. And she is not simply a woman on the side, she is one of many who really don't care about trans issues and would be terrible for the cause if she ran. I know she's a woman and all, but.
