The chart, which the Billboard 200 chart is based off, will be rebranded on May 20, and will feature two new tracks for each chart's first slot: the most-streamed song and the most-played song. There are also new criteria for counting streaming, and a requirement that one of the two songs have been in the public domain for at least five years to count. Moreover, the chart will feature the first top-50 songs powered by certified radio data. “Billboard is making these changes in response to market realities, especially with streaming and the impact that's had on charted material and artist popularity,” said Robert Pridgen, Billboard's chief product officer. “Our new chart will reflect the sound that's resonating through the marketplace today.” So what does this mean for artists? It's unclear. It could end up being a huge factor in the popularity of certain songs and labels, or perhaps even skew a performance a certain way. "Streaming is a big issue for industry folks because it impacts how songs get played and put in the public domain," said Joseph Vogel, senior VP of sales, digital and clubs at Atlantic Records. "This was a big reason the industry was not on board with streams in years past. So for an artist Unforgettable You is a contemplating platformer game about love. The story is told in the voice of a man reminiscing about the past. He remembers meeting the love of his life and all the turmoil that came with it. The game has light puzzle elements and some skill based parts but mostly the game is very mellow. You wander through different environments that are linked to the story. Features: 21 distinct levels with different elements A beautiful silhouette art style (like Limbo) Fully voiced narrated story (with subtitles) The game is free! Show More... It's fun to be thinking about a book with others who are just as curious as you are. The only thing that can ruin a book club would be if you share too much information or cause some of the members to put their books aside...so be careful and respectful of that. I hope you have fun with it. Aww... I liked things so much more when they weren't spoiled to me. I want to ask before I read things (I have Read all of this before) but I don't want to ruin it for myself :c'(Monday, April 1, 2012 Up-City Blues Funny, but I actually miss the missing public transport, the inaccessible beaches, the hot summer nights and the intimate quiet of the streets. It's just that I'm cut off from all that, except for occasional trips to the sea, but then those are done by car and in the summer at least I get a bit of shade on the way back. (yes, I live in a coastal community...that's what I get for trying to live in the city...) Now it's the start of the rainy season. Instead of it just pouring for a couple of weeks, I get a downpour for a month. During this time I've been lurking on Reddit and I've finally gotten the courage to submit an application. It had been a long time since I last wanted to change something, that's probably what made me push through with
