Cholecystokinin induced a single high amplitude dose-response curve in the circular muscle of the guinea pig gallbladder. The dose-response relationships to cholecystokinin octapeptide (CCK-8) were investigated in the circular muscle of the guinea pig gallbladder. CCK-8 induced an isolated contraction in a concentration dependent manner with an EC50 of 100 nM. The antagonism studies with CCK agonists and antagonists showed that CCK-8 induced contraction and the contraction was potentiated by CCK antagonists. In addition, contraction was inhibited by CCK agonists. Our results suggest that cholecystokinin octapeptide induced contraction in the gallbladder is a direct smooth muscle response. Mortality patterns by source of primary percutaneous coronary intervention: results from the Turkish ACS Registry. Sudden cardiac death (SCD) is a leading cause of mortality in patients after acute myocardial infarction (AMI). Achieving a prompt reperfusion by primary percutaneous coronary intervention (PPCI) is an independent predictor for favorable prognosis. However, the significance of prompt reperfusion is debated, in particular its impact on SCD. We sought to examine the patterns of in-hospital, 12-month and long-term mortality in patients who underwent PPCI in tertiary hospitals in Turkey. We analyzed the data from the Turkish Acute Coronary Syndromes Registry, which enrolled 1357 patients with ST-segment elevation myocardial infarction (STEMI), non-STEMI (NSTEMI), and unstable angina (UA). The patients were recruited from 5 tertiary hospitals. During hospitalization, in-hospital and 12-month mortality rates were analyzed. The analysis of long-term mortality was performed in the survivors of the first 12 months. No significant differences were observed in in-hospital mortality rates among the groups (STEMI 16.0%; NSTEMI 22.4%; and UA 13.4%). Also, no significant difference in long-term mortality rates was observed between the groups (STEMI 18.6%; NSTEMI 16.9%; and UA 12.0%). Although in-hospital mortality was higher among the STEMI group, over a 1-year follow-up period, the prognosis in these patients was similar to that of patients with NSTEMI and UA. These results suggest that PPCI improves survival in hospital and
