" A: As told by Nick you are reading a series of books. Once you read all the series you can probably take them out one by one. You can also remove the leading zeros in the beginning of the file by using the gsub function (before the grep is used) `rm(list=ls()) gsub(pattern="^0*(\\.|:)", replacement="", x=readLines(file="myFile"))` If you wish to see them in a nice tabular format you could do this by using `zapatar` function `library(Hmisc) setwd("./") allLines [Comparative study of changes in the cardiac natriuretic factor concentration in the perinatal period in pregnant women with chronic hypertension]. The concentration of atrial natriuretic factor was measured in maternal and fetal serum, amniotic fluid, maternal and cord blood and in newborn cord blood at different times of perinatal period in 32 pregnant women with chronic hypertension and in 11 pregnant women with normal blood pressure. High levels of atrial natriuretic factor in amniotic fluid, maternal and fetal blood were found in pregnant women with chronic hypertension. Atrial natriuretic factor concentration in newborn cord blood was not different in the two groups of patients (29.7 and 29.6 pM/l respectively). + 6. What is the remainder when w is divided by o?`
