of Filters Although Photoshop is great at fixing bad photos, it's not the ideal tool for making ones. Filters are a much better choice, as is the GIMP. Photoshop has so many filters that you should be careful to pick and choose them intelligently. Here are three of Photoshop's most popular filters:

- Brighten: Makes images look less gray
- Blur: Makes photos look more blurred
- Contrast: Enhances contrast in photos

Brighten and Blur Brighten, one of the most popular filters, uses screen-door sharpening to brighten photographs. Brighten also has a slight anti-aliasing effect, which makes it so the edges of the subject are slightly softened, particularly at lower contrast settings. Blur is another effective filter. It's easy to see where blurred edges are, yet it doesn't effect the rest of the image. If you use it in a critical way, the filter can even be an artistic tool for subtle transitions, which make viewers question the real world and wonder if they're not seeing it in a completely different way. Contrast The contrast filter is great for enhancing contrast in images. The contrast setting makes small changes to the overall color and contrast of the image. This is one of the most effective ways to make an image look more professional. Some filters can get a bit tricky. For example, when you use a filter called Unsharp Mask or Soften Filter, you may need to use the Undo key more than once to undo any mistakes. At one time, there was a limit on the number of times you could use the Undo function, but now it's unlimited. You can select only single layers or even group them together in the Layers dialog box by using the Layer or Groups button. When you use the group, the contents of the layer are sent through the filter without any change to the pixels. Click the Layer button after using the group

---

In a much-anticipated move, President Obama on Wednesday signed the Violence Against Women Act of 2013, following a lengthy and contentious debate in the Senate. The legislation allows federal criminal charges against someone who physically prevents an individual from leaving a current relationship, and also subjects them to enhanced penalties if they are convicted. Obama and his administration have long sought to enact the law, which was first enacted in 1994. Having failed in the past to secure passage, proponents in Congress and on the Obama administration's Domestic Policy Council watched closely to see how the Senate would fare. After reaching agreement on the contentious final few provisions of the bill, it was sent to the White House for Obama to sign. The new law will give the U.S. attorney general discretion to turn over to the Department of Justice the authority to prosecute certain federal crimes related to domestic violence. It will also expand the definition of domestic violence to include domestic violence between unmarried partners. Currently, only federal criminal charges related to the legal use of firearms against a woman who has been battered can be pursued, and federal criminal charges related to the use of a firearm in the commission of a violent crime, such as attempted murder and robbery, can only be pursued if a life is lost. Vulnerable women While not a panacea, the legislation will add to the arsenal of criminal penalties for the prevention of domestic violence, says Rita Brandt Grubb, interim vice president for research at the National Women's Law Center. For instance, it will allow people who physically prevent an individual from leaving a current relationship to be charged with a misdemeanor, which can carry up to one year in jail, or a felony, which carries up to five years. The legislation also adds a provision that would allow state courts to impose a prison sentence of up to five years for individuals who illegally restrain an individual with the intention of furthering emotional or physical harm, and that if the victim is pregnant, the individual also faces a minimum mandatory sentence of five years. The legislation, which was sponsored by Sen. Richard Blumenthal (D-Conn.) and Rep. Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-D.C.), passed the House of Representatives on Oct. 31, and was approved by the Senate on Tuesday. Brandt Grubb says she is pleased that the legislation takes a broader view of domestic violence than previously permitted. "We think the law did not provide the level of protection that it should have," she says. Among those who supported the

Ask HN: Can a new startup be profitable in

a short period of time? - steveklabnik

We're close to starting, but I have doubts about whether it can be profitable in 3-6 months. Our technical team are all old startup veterans, we're all optimistic, but we have some really big problems that are preventing us from getting started. After 10 years of working on this stuff, I'd like to know: is it possible to pull this off, or do we need a bootstrapping prototype? If the latter, which design patterns are you thinking would be useful in a bootstrapping

prototype? ===== nostrademons

Bootstrapping prototypes are pretty rare. If you can manage to build a fairly high-functioning MVP in a month, then you can probably get people invested in it. That could lead to more traction, more users, more interest, and so on. But you're talking about 3-6 months not "in 3-6 months."

Some of the ideas we've had about how to bootstrap a prototype would be: * Use a library like React. It's built to allow you to build a new app that looks like the original app in a couple of weeks. * Use an HTTP library like node.js. This is how we initially built our API back in 2010 and it was pretty useful, since you can build stuff very quickly. * Build your own server and host it yourself. I've also done this for the sake of simplifying the deployment process. * Use some hosted database service to host it. If you're not going to be your own customer, using a hosted database is a good way to get things set up quickly. * Use Amazon Web Services (AWS). Costs less than most of the alternatives, and you can get started quickly. * Use a service like [ that does deployment for you. * Use a service like [ that lets you deploy to Heroku, and then gives you a URL for your app. (If you want to be your own customer, you'll want to use an AWS-based
