3. Open your photo by choosing File⇒Open. 4. Ensure that your photo is currently on the open tab. 5. Choose Select Tools⇒All Tools. Photoshop's All Tools setting appears. 6. Choose Modify⇒Adjustments⇒Levels. Photoshop's Levels Adjustment dialog box opens. The Adjustments panel may be hidden under the History tab. 7. Click the Eyedropper tool and then click the area of the original image that you want to retain. The eyedropper tool appears in the Levels dialog box and the tool selects the targeted area of the image. 8. Click the middle of the Levels dialog box to put a dot at the location of 50,000. As you click the dialog box's middle, the Levels dialog box increases the amount of tonal information in the selected area. 9. Drag the dot to the right until you see the image start to darken. This tells you how far you need to drag the dot to get it to 50,000. 10. Click the Add button to lock the exposure in the Selected Areas. This sets the middle value as 50,000. The eyeball icon that represents the dot represents the current value of the dot. This enables you to see visually if you're properly setting the levels. 11. Click OK. If you now drag the dot to the right, the image darkens until it reaches the other values. You may find that the Levels panel is now labeled with the input value at the top. If you double-click to open the dialog box, Photoshop displays the selected level as 50,000. (The name of the dialog box may change depending on the version of Photoshop that you're using.) After setting the level in the Levels dialog box, you return to your image with a 50,000 value in the histogram. To add your own custom levels to an image, you need to return to the histogram so that you can tweak it. (The histogram will appear when you click the histogram icon, shown in the margin.) Photoshop Elements users have a similar histogram that makes it easy to see how much of the image is blown out or underexposed. (You can

What are the advantages of Adobe Photoshop Essentials? Adobe Photoshop Essentials is a simple and easy to use image editing software for photographers and hobbyists. If you are a beginner and new to Adobe Photoshop Essentials, here are three reasons why it is a good choice for you. + You don't need to sign up for Adobe to use Photoshop Elements. All products run on the same app that everyone already uses. + With Photoshop Essentials you get much more for your money than you get with Adobe Photoshop for $4.99 a month. + You get new features and updates faster with Photoshop Essentials than with Adobe Photoshop for $4.99 a month. + Photoshop Essentials doesn't have as many tools as the professional version. If you are an advanced Photoshop user, here are some reasons why Photoshop Essentials is still a good choice. + Photoshop Essentials is designed as a professional software with the same features as the professional version. If you are a commercial photographer, a graphic designer or a web designer, Photoshop Elements is still a viable option for you. + Photoshop Essentials has a free version without ads. You can install it on a laptop and use it without being charged. + Photoshop Essentials is a cheaper alternative to Photoshop. If you are a hobbyist, Photoshop Elements is probably cheaper than the fully-featured Photoshop. Is Adobe Photoshop Essentials cheaper than Adobe Photoshop? No. Adobe Photoshop Essentials has a monthly subscription fee of $12.99 a month. Photoshop is $4.99 a month. If you use Photoshop, you are paying $8.98 a month unnecessarily. To clarify: If you use the paid version of Photoshop, you are paying for a license to use the software. Even if you never use the full version of Photoshop, your license will allow you to use Elements, whether you need it or not. At the time of writing (2019), using the fully-featured version of Photoshop costs about $520 a year. If you use the free version of Elements, the monthly subscription is $12.99. Using Photoshop Elements costs around $75 a year. This means you save $440 a year if you use Photoshop Elements instead of Photoshop.
