My purpose is to help everyone who has got a problem. Ask HN: Needs as a new freelancer: how to find customers? - alex- Hi, I have been freelance engineer for a little over a year now and I am now ready to start working for other people, also as a full-time freelancer. I am looking for ways to find customers. I have been working with Shopify and Solved, but these are just training platforms. I know that with my current background, I do have a better chance of finding a bigger business who would need my skills.I have tried using Linkedin / Facebook ads. What I have found is that you get a lot of people who have no intention of ever working with you, for reasons that I don't understand. I have tried targeted LinkedIn ads and made a general post on Facebook. I even have a friend who is a contractor who asked me to work with him and he literally had zero activity, only a couple of messages and a mutual friend. In the end, we agreed that it is a chicken and egg situation, that I had to build a history before anyone would take me seriously.How do I get started? ===== sarcasmatwork Read all the posts here, not just this one, and listen to the advice. ----- sarcasmatwork Patience and lots of searching and interviewing. ~~~ alex- Thanks a lot for your feedback. Will do. :) Q: shell script to copy a file from a remote server Can somebody help me with writing a shell script to copy a file from a remote server? I'm not a Linux expert. I have a Linux server, and I want to write a shell script that copy files from a remote Windows Server. I have no access to the remote Linux server. I want to copy file from remote Linux to Windows server. Note: The Windows server will not have any access to the file Thanks A: Look at the scp command in the net/ssh package.
