Forgot Password?; Migrating WCF REST 3 Service to WCF 4.0 I've been looking for a way to migrate some existing WCF REST services to 4.0. I've been successful in copying the web.config sections but the REST service is having trouble returning a HttpResponseMessage. It's an HttpResponseMessageResponseContext is still being returned. Is there a known list of what changed between WCF 3.5 and WCF 4.0? A: states the following about the HttpResponseMessage for WCF REST (even though the page is talking about WCF binding) Beginning in Framework version 3.5, the HttpResponseMessage and ContentNegotiatingMapping behaviors are removed. As a side note (and it's not to say that it's not relevant but...), WCF REST actually built on.NET Remoting. Lists the remoting-facade support in WCF and it shows that the remoting support is where the HttpResponseMessage is coming from. I would be willing to bet that the HttpResponseMessageResponseContext is not going to be supported if it is using.NET Remoting. Aflatoxin exposure in agricultural workers in Mexico. A study was conducted in agroecosystems in Mexico to determine whether or not aflatoxin is widely present in agricultural environments and to assess awareness of the health risks associated with aflatoxin exposure. Of the 966 subjects, 425 (44%) were from agricultural populations and 531 (56%) were from urban population controls. All of the agricultural subjects were recruited from two areas of the Mexican State of Nuevo Leon. Of the 835 agricultural subjects, 78% reported that they had visited the field and were aware that the crop might contain toxins. Only 37% were willing to enter the field with equipment to
