A randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled, five-arm pilot trial on the treatment of chemotherapy-induced gastrointestinal mucositis. To assess the safety and efficacy of high-dose vitamin E in the prevention of chemotherapy-induced gastrointestinal mucositis (GIM). Chemotherapy-induced GIM is one of the most frequently occurring side effects of anticancer treatment and can be severe. This randomized, placebo-controlled, double-blinded, parallel-group trial was conducted in patients who received chemotherapy for solid tumors. Patients were assigned to receive either a treatment arm of twice-daily high-dose oral vitamin E (800 mg/day) or placebo. Primary outcome measures were: (1) the incidence of overall GIM, (2) the duration of overall GIM, and (3) the incidence of grade 3 GIM. A total of 134 patients were randomized, of whom 83 received chemotherapy and were analyzed for safety, and 65 received chemotherapy and were analyzed for efficacy. High-dose vitamin E treatment did not significantly reduce the incidence of overall GIM (83.1% in the vitamin E group vs. 82.7% in the placebo group, $p = 0.9$) or increase the incidence of grade 3 GIM (12.9% in the vitamin E group vs. 10.0% in the placebo group, $p = 0.4$). There was a trend towards a reduction of duration of overall GIM with vitamin E compared to placebo (median: 6 days vs. 9 days, $p = 0.09$). I am using spring batch for batch processing. I have already read some article about spring batch. And they all mentioned about step or chunk size or transaction. But I couldn't understand what is the difference between them. Please explain in simple terms. A: Where do you have seen the word "chunk" in the context of Batch? A "chunk" here simply refers to the files that your Batch Job will process. For example, if you plan to process 10 items per file, then your Job will receive 10 records in a single Job-run and must decide where to process the second chunk, and so on. A "step" by contrast is a unit of operation for a single item in a single step. This could be a custom step written by you, or a file-based step (run files). Or it could be an mapper (like an SQL map to a record). In your Job, you may write, for example, a database step that inserts a row in a table for each record processed, and then process the next chunk. You can do the same thing with a couple of mapper steps, and you would write your own step. The main difference between these two approaches is that a custom step and file-based step are both run on the "first time" of a chunk. A file-based step could be run a "second time" (as you say) on another chunk (item), but that is because it effectively does not make sense to reuse the data generated for the preceding chunk. The custom step, on the other hand, could be configured to reuse the data for the first chunk. The transaction is strictly related to JTA transactions. In the case of a file-based
