You've got a business to run As the new year sets in, let's take a look at New Year's resolutions and wish lists for entrepreneurs. The next few months are crucial for many small-business owners, and it's not only because so much of the year is spent on the sales and marketing aspect of running a business. "The number one issue for most people is that by February 1 they have to make some decisions about how to spend their money," said Eugene Soloway, an IRS audit supervisor in Bluffton. While they're getting started on your personal financial goal sheet, have a look at New Year's resolution lists for the different types of business you operate. To understand business development, know your customers Have you ever made a New Year's resolution to be more friendly to your clients, but kept it a secret from them? That's probably not a good idea. It's essential that you know who your customers are and what they're looking for, the CEO of Bluffton's Pease Commercial Real Estate said. "You have to take the time to sit down and think about what you're going to offer," explained Dick Pease, president of the Bluffton-based commercial real estate firm. "What you're selling is not your products, but you're selling your expertise. That's why you have to get to know your customers," he said. That involves walking through a marketplace, asking questions and listening. Doing business
