When they mispronounce a name or spell the camera off, it doesn't get a reaction. With Real Steel they say things that are deemed too obscene to be said on public radio, but people have no problem hearing them on FFF. Are there certain callers/volunteers/board members that you have to work around? Usually the board members are the group that everyone works with. Most of the volunteers have the same dynamic, so if we know that person, they aren't a problem either. Who do you enjoy working with? All the people in the studio are my friends. Mornings and nights are the best. I'm starting to work more on the mornings with my husband (Felice), and evenings with Daniel. The days are the best. Who would you want to work with, other than the Big Red Button? I'd like to work with everyone on the show, but that might take a little while. I'd prefer to work with Howard Stern, but he's too crazy for our radio station. What's your own success story? (laughs) That would be a long story. I worked at a record store for six years then went to film school. I cut my teeth in the film industry. I was a projectionist in film school. I was a film programmer before I worked in the record store. I did it for about two years and then went to film school. To jump ahead; you've worked on film productions, but what kind of projects are you most interested in? The most fun I had working on a film was Guevara:
