James John Gumbel (born December 5, 1949) is an American journalist who served as the host of CBS News' Eye on America, the program that broadcast the network's coverage of the 2012 Republican National Convention. His career as an investigative reporter has spanned three decades, beginning with an award-winning investigation into racial problems at the Los Angeles Police Department in the 1980s, and including the 1999 filming of a report that led to the conviction of California politician George Felton for extortion.

Biography Early life and career Gumbel was born in Los Angeles and attended public schools in the Los Angeles Unified School District, including John Marshall High School. He then studied history at Stanford University and graduate school in public policy at Columbia University. He was a freelance writer who worked at The New York Times from 1973 to 1979. He also worked for ABC News, CBS News, Time Magazine and as a documentarian for documentaries for the Smithsonian Institution. In the 1980s, he worked as a television reporter for KNBC-TV in Los Angeles. At that time, he was a reporter for two ABC News programs, Good Morning America and World News Tonight. Los Angeles journalist and murder In 1988, Gumbel became the first television reporter to break the story of a murder committed by the LAPD. Gumbel reported on the assassination of the police officer's wife, Madeline Duncan, by her husband, Ernest 'Bumpy' Johnson. The story was a catalyst in passage of the California legislature's widely debated initiatives known as the "Shotgun" laws. In 1996, he wrote an ABC News Book of the Year Award winner, After Blue, on the manhunt for 6d1f23a050
