TheÂ .At Dayton Private Bank, we have been working to re-establish ourselves to the point where we are the premiere bank for the residents of Dayton, Ohio. We are excited to share what we have been up to. We've been expanding in Ohio, growing from 1 branch to 4. And one of those 4 new locations will be opening in the next few months. In that process, we have restructured our Private Banking business, from a larger client base, down to a smaller, more boutique service. Now, we are excited to announce that we are expanding our services to your local community. This is our first official client partnership with the University of Dayton. As is our custom, we will reach out to students, faculty, alumni and others in the community to partner with us in the same way we partner with our clients. Our relationship with UD will be built on the principles of respect, integrity, competence, and professionalism. We have been a proud supporter of UD for several years and are excited to be a part of the community we live in.Q: Is there a way to get the list of all $wpdb->prefix*() functions? In WordPress, most of the database functions have one or more prefix in front of them. Such as $wpdb->prefix, $wpdb->prefix_checks, $wpdb->prefix_tables, etc. But I could not find a manual page of all of these functions. Is there a way to list all of these functions? A: There is list of all those functions available under $wpdb->prefix_* which can be found at WordPress.org/Code/Database/ A: I know this will sound counter-intuitive, but try $wpdb->list_collections eg: $sql = $wpdb->list_collections 6d1f23a050
