is expected to make a major announcement at the White House on Wednesday. The president has been hinting for weeks at a big announcement, but CNN believes it could be about immigration. This comes as members of the Trump administration continue to clash on the issue. Visit BusinessInsider.com for more stories. CNN is reporting that President Donald Trump will make a major announcement on immigration at the White House on Wednesday, the biggest foreign policy issue facing the Trump administration. Trump's announcement comes as members of his administration continue to clash over the issue, with several high-level officials taking a more moderate position on visas for high-skilled immigrants than the administration's hardline stance, which focuses on limiting immigration from Muslim-majority countries and prioritizing Christian immigrants. Trump is also facing a clash of views within his own administration on the issue. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) officials, led by acting Director Tom Homan, are pressing for the White House to hold firm to its immigration order, while other officials are more flexible.
