(Cannot "clear" a vector using a for-loop I'm running through several different exercises now and decided to try to implement a simple "hello world" program (finally!) but am struggling with a vector problem: I have a vector of ints called nums (size = 10) that I want to "clear". However, if I use a for-loop like this: for(int i = 0; i v(10); for (int i = 0; i v(10); for (int

Hormone

receptors, usually estrogen and progesterone receptors, are found in about 80% of breast cancers. In the presence of hormone, an increase in the number of receptors usually accompanies breast cancer. In some tumors there is an increase in the number of receptors, but no increase in the number of tumors, in the presence of hormonal stimulation. This situation may be associated with factors unrelated to tumor growth, or, more likely, these tumors are resistant to the effects of the hormones (e.g., a low response to estrogen stimulation or an insufficient number of receptors).Q: Subgroup of a free group whose quotient is finite The following is a theorem from the book "Algebraic
