I'm using a Perl script from John Nunemaker here on OS X to convert the results into a CSV file. There are a couple of things I'm interested in solving. The first is that the script is not working as expected and I suspect the problem is either due to me having an imperfect understanding of Unicode and/or the OPAC file formats I'm reading from. The script seems to be failing to process the "Schema Name" (which contains the UTF-8 version of "and" ("AH") and the "Schema Number" (which contains the UTF-8 version of "11") so my first attempt at finding and fixing the problem was to switch to Unicode UTF-16LE from UTF-8, to no avail. The second thing is that the file is outputting all the characters as "U+FFFD" (for example Ð = U+FFFD (decimal value 65533) rather than the UTF-8 versions, so as I'm reading the CSV file in my script from a file rather than a URL I end up with some dodgy results as the "U+FFFD" characters are interpreted as empty cells in my CSV file. A: The OPAC file format uses a custom encoding to represent author and title names, numbers, etc. as tags. UTF-8 was not the original encoding, and it's not complete. You need to add support for this encoding; the last tag is a three-byte UTF-8 code point that says "I don't have a name, I have c6a93da74d
